EXPERIENCE STRING FURNITURE AT FRAMING DURING 3DAYSOFDESIGN

String is much more than a bookshelf. String creates and defines a room within the room. You don't buy a String; you design a String, which is why the combinations are endless. It's highly personal interior design with great flexibility where new usages never cease to surprise you. Experience it for yourself at Framing's exhibition at the Odd Fellow Palace during 3daysofdesign this week.

The Odd Fellow Palace, an iconic and impressive rococo building, has inspired String Furniture to showcase how modern design naturally blends into any interior decoration style. The monochrome exhibition in white emphasizes the contrast of the bright red walls rather than stealing the attention from them and the rooms' distinct design. To accentuate the different needs a String combination can fill, the exhibition is filled with beautiful objects in various materials, such as a wedding dress in tulle, sneakers in canvas, champagne glasses etc.

The new Tiny cabinet, which only comes in walnut, is one of the exhibition's highlights and the product that adds a little warmth to the all-white exhibition. The new adjustable Museum Candle holder is the smallest exhibited product, but the one that embodies the whole theme: Modern rococo. The galvanized outdoor shelf is situated in the garden, and it goes in the same style as the indoor exhibition with beautiful white fresh flowers.

The exhibition conveys how different String Furniture's product can be perceived depending on the surrounding. The core concept is to showcase String as the 'constant' in various settings and interiors to inspire a creative mindset when decorating your home. Regardless of your home's style.
